Celebrating 60 Years of Keeping New Zealand Moving

In 2026, TWL proudly marks 60 years supporting New Zealand's heavy transport sector - a milestone built on strong partnerships with some of the world's most trusted innovators. From global leaders to proven local brands, these partners have shaped the reliability, safety, and performance of transport across the country. As we celebrate six decades of service, we honour the heritage and engineering excellence that continues to drive TWL and our customers forward.

Meritor: A Legacy of Drivetrain Strength

Founded as Timken-Detroit Axle, Meritor has been driving heavy transport innovation for more than a century. Through its evolution under Rockwell and into today, Meritor has led the industry in axles, brakes, suspension and drivetrain systems built for durability in the toughest conditions. Now part of Cummins, Meritor continues to set the benchmark for power, reliability, and performance across global transport fleets.

Hendrickson: Pioneers in Suspension Innovation

Established in 1913, Hendrickson reshaped heavy vehicle engineering with the creation of the iconic walking beam suspension, a design that became standard across generations of trucks and trailers. Originally a family-owned manufacturer, Hendrickson exited truck production in 1985 to focus solely on suspension and components - growing into a global leader trusted for strength, stability, and ride quality.

SKF: Over a Century of Engineering Excellence

Founded in 1907 with the invention of the self-aligning ball bearing, SKF quickly became a global leader in bearing technology. The company even founded AB Volvo in 1926 to showcase the reliability of SKF bearings.

SKF's legacy includes motorsport innovation, with a partnership formed in 1947 with Scuderia Ferrari - Formula 1's longest-running technical collaboration. Growth continued through strategic acquisitions such as Chicago Rawhide in 1990, expanding SKF's expertise in seals and drivetrain solutions.

In 2024 SKF announced the separation of its automotive division to sharpen focus and accelerate innovation.

A key milestone for NZ: in 2025, TWL became the official New Zealand distributor for SKF, bringing world-leading quality to local operators.

TWL 60 Years Road Ready: Backing Omikron and Backing You

As part of our 60th year of keeping New Zealand road ready, we teamed up with Rod and Colin from Omikron for a quick South Island run. As TWL evolves, we're always looking to add great products like Omikron, which we continue to back with trips around the country to deliver advice and support to ensure the best results for every vehicle, from mum's car to the biggest trucking fleets.

Timaru was stop one, complete with sausage rolls and customer visits with young Ollie. The weather bomb meant no demos, but plenty of shared knowledge. Dunedin was even wetter, so still no demos, but we caught up with long term customers keen to see how Omikron can save them time and money. Oh, and the boys helped tidy up the Dunedin display while we were there.

By the time we hit Invercargill, summer finally showed up. We ran proper hands on demos, this is where we hear customers expressions as they see it working... we call that the Omikron wow! Great yarns, great people, and the reminder that our southern teams are some of the best.

Just under 1500 kilometres later, we wrapped up another solid trip. We'll keep supporting Omikron across New Zealand, and we'll keep supporting you.

See you when we're in your region.

TWICE THE SHINE IN 1/2 THE TIME. ALL IN ONE BUCKET!

STORIES from our 60 YEARS

Dwayne McKenzie

Dwayne McKenzie joined TWL in 2005 as a Storeperson and has worked his way through several roles since then, including CSR and Branch Supervisor, before stepping into his current role as Branch Manager. Over two decades with the business, Dwayne says it's the people he has met along the way that stand out the most and have kept him coming back every day.

One thing that has always made him proud is how the team responds when it really matters. During major events or emergencies, branches rally together, organising rep ute deliveries and doing whatever it takes to get parts into cut-off communities so operators can keep moving. While plenty has changed over the years, TWL's commitment to great service has remained the same. Dwayne has always enjoyed working in the Heavy Transport category, where there is always something new to learn. His advice for anyone starting at TWL is simple: take your time and learn the products. "Open the boxes and see what's inside," he says. The photo he shared sums it up well, it's the team around him who keep him coming back every day.

Andrew Watson

Andrew Watson first joined TWL as a Sales Representative covering Canterbury. After some time away from the business, he couldn't resist coming back, returning as Product Manager for Heavy Transport before later moving across to Transpecs, where he now works as Product Manager for SAF, a brand he describes simply as "a great product."

Andrew says TWL always felt like a well-oiled machine, supported by the huge range of products available to keep customers moving. One of the most rewarding parts of the job is when customers call because they trust your knowledge, and being able to pass that knowledge on by training others. His advice for anyone starting at TWL is simple: listen more than you talk. As he puts it, "two ears, one mouth," and never be afraid to ask questions.

While Andrew may have jumped across to the red team at sister company Transpecs, a part of him will always be true to the blue. That's why when it came time to buy a Harley, TWL(ish) blue was the only answer!

Judy Ratahi

Judy Ratahi first joined TWL in 1999 as a Credit Controller. After five years she continued in similar roles across CAT, Transpecs and Palfinger, before later returning to work with TWL customers again in 2019. In 2021 Judy stepped into the role of Accounts Receivable Manager. Over the years she says it's the combination of great brands, great staff and great customers that has made the job so rewarding.

When Judy first started, TWL felt very much like a family business, with strong relationships between staff, reps and customers. That sense of camaraderie is something she says hasn't changed, even as the business has grown and new branches have opened. One memory that still stands out is the friendly office rivalry during rugby season. As a proud Crusaders supporter, Judy decorated her office in red and black bunting, flags and jerseys to rival Purchasing Officer Mark McKenzie next door, a loyal Highlanders fan. Judy even went the extra step of offering visitors black and red lollies to complete the theme.

Judy says she still feels a sense of pride every time she comes up behind a truck on the road with the Kiwi icon, TWL DG Flip. Her advice for anyone starting at TWL today is simple: take pride in promoting the business because it's a proven winner.

And as any credit controller knows, you hear plenty of interesting reasons why invoices might be late, including one memorable call from a customer who missed posting a cheque because he had to stop and pull a cow out of the mud on the way to the rural mailbox.

Warren Bills

Warren Bills started with TWL in October 1974 as a Heavy Transport Specialist travelling throughout the South Island. Over the years he went on to hold more than 16 roles across the business, including Regional Manager for Christchurch, Nelson, Timaru and Greymouth, Product Manager across several ranges, Distribution Manager, and becoming New Zealand's third Heavy Brake Code Certifier.

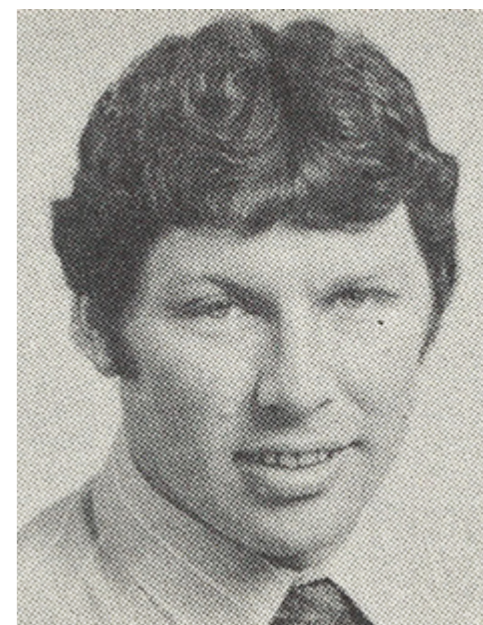

Reflecting on his time with the company, Warren says the reason he has stayed so long comes down to "the love of the company, the challenges and variety of work. Not many can say they have been here 44 plus years." His career reflects both the growth of TWL and the depth of experience built across more than four decades in the transport industry.

When Warren first joined, TWL had a real family atmosphere. The warehouse operated from Les Cleveland's shed beside the house, the lunchroom doubled as the music room, and Les's wife Connie baked morning and afternoon tea for the team. Everyone pitched in, from unloading stock to helping customers.

While the industry has changed dramatically since then, moving from vacuum and drum brakes to modern air and disc brake systems with ABS and EBS, one thing Warren says hasn't changed is the TWL name. As he puts it, "If it isn't broken, leave it alone. The industry knows who TWL are.

"For anyone starting at TWL today, Warren's advice is simple: learn the products, understand what they're used for and where they go, and don't be afraid to ask experienced staff for help. The transport industry is always evolving, and there's always something new to learn.

Jonathan Patrick

Jonathan Patrick joined TWL on 11 November 2002 as the Branch Supervisor of the newly opened Timaru branch. Since then he has worked as both a TSR and Branch Manager, building strong relationships with customers across the region. Jonathan says it's the challenges of the job and the relationships built with customers over the years that have kept him at TWL.

When Jonathan first joined, TWL stood out as technically advanced for the industry, already making strong use of email and the internet. Since then he has seen big changes in transport, particularly the move in heavy trailer braking from mainly drum systems to disc brakes. One thing that hasn't changed, the Sealco part numbers! Some still matching catalogues from the early days.

Jonathan has always enjoyed the light trailer category, where the wide variety of parts and setups keeps things interesting. His advice for anyone starting at TWL today is simple: get to work early, keep an open mind, and be prepared to learn, because TWL sells a huge range of products.

Grant Ellis

Grant Ellis joined TWL on 17 July 2001 as a sales representative covering Nelson, Motueka, Golden Bay and Marlborough. Since then, his role has grown to Supervisor Rep and Manager Rep, and today he looks after the Nelson and Greymouth branches. Grant says the most rewarding part of the job has been working closely with customers and learning from them while tackling projects together.

One of his earliest memories was heading out with TWL veteran, Graeme Bruning at around 3:30am to meet a West Coast customer. They arrived at the workshop while it was still dark and dead quiet. When Grant asked why they were there so early if no one was around, Graeme walked him next door to the customer's house, knocked on the door to introduce him while the customer answered in his pyjamas.

Since then, Grant has seen rapid change in transport technology, particularly with systems like EBS braking and tyre inflation, while the importance of good service and strong relationships with customers has remained the same. His advice for new starters is simple: never forget who is at the end of the phone, because without the customer there is no business. And as for the oddest thing he's ever sold? Toilet paper, no joke, 528 rolls and counting.

Celebrating Our Partnership with these Great Deals!

TWL and Vertex Lubricants, A Partnership

TWL set out about 15 years ago to find a lubricants supplier, because they could see they were missing one vital product range to support workshops across the country. Lubricants New Zealand, now known as Vertex NZ, ticked all the boxes.

Vertex supports TWL not only with nationwide supply but with technical and sales support plus Vertex has one of the widest ranges of products available, from engine, transmission, gear, and industrial oils to coolants and workshop chemicals including AdBlue to name but a few.

TWL and Vertex work in partnership to support the transport industry, this has proven to be a very successful approach and long may it last.

From all of us at Vertex Lubricants: congratulations to TWL on 60 years of business in New Zealand, a true icon of the industry.
