

DANGEROUS GOODS MARINE POLLUTANTS KIT

As of the 1st July Maritime NZ require mandatory changes to the signage of vehicles carrying dangerous goods.

Information Provided by Interislander (Slightly Edited)

From 1 July 2014, Maritime New Zealand, as part of a review of Maritime Rule 24A, are relaxing the standards for placarding of freight vehicles carrying dangerous goods.

Previously, all units carrying dangerous goods were required to be placarded on all four sides of the vehicle, but from 01 July, these placards will only need to be displayed on the front and rear of a vehicle truck unit and or trailer. This four sided requirement has not been met in the past. The front and rear application will be mandatory from 1 July, 2014.

The use of the road transport mixed class placard (commonly referred to as the "bumble bee") is not acceptable for maritime transport.

Should the vehicle be carrying marine pollutants, the vehicle must display marine pollutant placards on front and rear of the unit.

If the vehicle is carrying dangerous goods packed in limited quantities only, you need only display the limited quantities placard as shown at right:

However, if your vehicle is carrying both dangerous goods and dangerous goods packed in limited quantities, your unit needs to be placarded and marked according to the provisions applicable to the dangerous goods that are not placarded in limited quantities. Examples below:

It is not suitable any more to simply fold placards into curtain buckles on the sides of the units whilst traveling. The placards need to be attached onto the units, either pasted (not really suitable) or in multiple display boards attached to the front and rear of the units.

Should you have any questions regarding these amended regulations, please call the INTERISLANDER team on 0800 660670. They'll be happy to assist.
